0006	BHL-Europe Newsletter #1	Collective	"For dissemination of the idea we have launched the BHL-Europe Newsletter, providing more detailed information about the project and associated activities. These are largely digitizing activities centered on taxonomical literature and biodiversity. The main purpose of the newsletter is to provide up-to-date information about the project and new project outcomes, meetings and other information which could be helpful to a variety of users. Additionally, we will also publish news about other projects and initiatives dealing with digitalization and biodiversity. We look forward to the work and hope to provide you with useful information focused on digitalization and biodiversity." In 2011 we attended a number of large and important conferences that are featured with articles in this newsletter. During the Life and Literature conference in Chicago we promoted the Biodiversity Library Exhibition and got a lot of positive feedback and encouragement to sustain it and develop it further. The BHL-Europe business model was well received during the DISH conference in Rotterdam. BHL-Europe also managed to promote the project during the CCPA plenary meeting." 0011	BHL-Europe Newsletter #5/6	Collective	"With the end of this reporting period and the end of the first half of the project, we now have prototype solutions for all three access points mentioned above. More than 300,000 library records are available in GRIB. The German Prototype is available giving access to three collections. These collections are also available through Europeana. The work on the final BHL-Europe system is progressing well. The architecture is now defined. The hardware is configured and first content is already copied to the system in London. The identification of the use cases for this system will be finished soon taking into account the results of the first large scale user evaluation in spring 2010." 0014	BHL-Europe Newsletter #9	Collective	"BHL-Europe is now in the final project year. We successfully passed the second annual review meeting and received a green flag from the European Commission. We can now proceed to focus on the project objectives.Parallel to the work on the different access points to digital biodiversity literature (GRIB, BHL-Europe Portal, Europeana) we now also intensify our efforts to keep BHL-Europe operational after the end of the project. This also includes the investigation of ideas for new projects.With OpenUp! and Natural Europe, two ICT-PSP projects joined the group of biodiversity related projects this year. We will follow their progress and also investigate the collaboration potential. This BHL-Europe newsletter features the OpenUp! project with a dedicated article." 0016	BHL-Europe System Description for the German Prototyp (D3.6)	AIT	"The purpose of the BHL-Europe German prototype is to establish a metadata platform for the discovery and diffusion of biodiversity heritage literature. The prototype addresses problems of interactivity between different systems, which are mainly caused by varying methods of metadata description. Existing software tools are used to map fields from each database onto a project-defined standard format. The aggregation platform Dismarc MetaDataManager (MDM) serves as a basis for the prototype development." 0017	BHL-Europe Use Case Documentation for the German Prototyp (D3.6)	AIT	"The BHL-Europe German prototype will provide a single user interface (via Web Site) allowing users to access biodiversity heritage literature of the BHL-Europe. The BHL-Europe German prototype provides an OAI data provider for Europeana which contains metadata from the BHL-Europe partner archives. All BHL-Europe metadata is exposed to be harvested by the Europeana-harvester and copied onto the central EuropeanaSystem. The data is also integrated into the German prototype system (indexing, searching, browsing)" [Taken from the document.]	22-Nov-2010	Version 1.2	Collections Manager / Technicians	Projects and Networks > BHL-Europe; Technical questions > Database systems; Technical questions > data exchange schemas and protocols	Indirect	AIT	BHL-Europe	European Commission	English	PDF	120	21-Apr-2012	http://www.bhl-europe.eu/en/webfm_send/131	n/a

0028	D5.9 Second user evaluation report	Jifi Kvaček, Jifi Frank	"BHL-Europe has to understand and evaluate the requirements of the target users and how they are going to use the results of the project. This document describes what lessons we learned from the two initial survey of the projects and how we used these to develop and implement the new BHL-Europe Portal. In addition to user surveys, we also have to evaluate the development progress continuously and thus established a testing process in BHL-Europe. This is described in detail herein as well as the outcomes of the three testing phases. Eventually, we did a final user survey to evaluate the final outcomes and matched them against the user preferences identified before." 0054	C3.2.1 Contribution to the Global Name Architecture (GBIF/ECAT white paper)	Anonymous	"The GBIF Strategic Plan calls for the creation of a federated ECAT 'catalogue' implying a dedicated and discreet centrally available electronic list of names applied to the organisms of the Earth. Significant proportions of these names remain unavailable to the GBIF network yet and must be made available via a distributed provider network. Since ECAT resources are limited, to establish global and regional capacity, context and value, the decentralized GBIF network requires a close collaboration with other (global and regional) biodiversity initiatives. The ECAT-supported infrastructure that facilitates the inventorying, maintenance, creation, integration, and serving of taxonomic resources for regional and global access is not only mobilized within the GBIF Nodes, but also available through liaison with regional (e.g. EC or NSF funded) programs." 0055	C4.3.1 Summary conclusions of symposium with what the participants envision as the roadmap" for the immediate future of taxonomic research"	Anonymous	"Understanding the origin and diversity of the living world is a cumbersome endeavour that requires a revision of traditional taxonomic practices. However, it is widely recognized that progress in the study of biodiversity in this time of crisis is hindered by a worldwide shortage of taxonomists coupled with a lack of enough funding for taxonomic study (the "Taxonomic impediment"). To overcome this impediment, it is mandatory both to adopt new technologies developed in other fields for taxonomic use, and to address the key conceptual challenges that taxonomy faces. Under the auspices of EDIT (European Distributed Institute of Taxonomy), 25 European scientists actively publishing in taxonomy, 90 EDIT members, 17 non-EDIT CETAF (Consortium of European Taxonomic Facilities) members, and 15 speakers were invited to gather in a 3-day symposium to discuss in depth future trends of taxonomy." 0056	D.5. PR and Communication Plan (Full)	Simon J. Mayo	"EDIT's Communication Plan needs to demonstrate that networked, integrated taxonomic resources (human and institutional) as exemplified by EDIT, can overcome the Taxonomic Impediment and greatly improve the delivery and performance of modern taxonomic science in tackling key regional and global problems in biodiversity science and conservation. Separate audiences will require separate messages. The Communication Plan should 1) promote taxonomy and key achievements of taxonomic science for the general public; 2) influence decision-makers, especially in European Union, with a view to increasing future funding prospects for taxonomic science; 3) reinforce the sense of common purpose within the EDIT taxonomic community and beyond." CETAF decision will be made at its next meeting in April. If the CETAF could not implement the plan elaborated jointly by EDIT and the CETAF Executive Committee as summarized further, the option will be to continue with a more restricted consortium, focused on the largest European Taxonomic Institutions but still opened to partners willing to join." 0068	D2.1.1 Report on existing relevant directories	Anonymous	"Taken together, European taxonomists constitute a potentially extremely powerful workforce to deal with the challenges identified by EDIT. However, the European expertise is currently badly fragmented by taxa (e.g. botanists / zoologists, entomologists / other zoologists, etc.), by countries, by institutions, and by status of the experts (professional / amateurs), resulting in a suboptimal use of both human and financial resources: the rate of experts per taxon is extremely uneven, and needs for expertise have overall little effect on recruitment strategies because we have no overview of the existing spectrum of taxonomic expertise at the European level." The database is presently located at www.EditExpertNet.org . The objective of the database is to provide an efficient online information service on European Taxonomic experts, their expertise and ongoing and planned taxonomic research projects. It provides searchable information on the taxonomists' expertise down to family level, their research activities, methods used and geographical and environmental distribution of research organisms. At present, the scope of the taxonomic expertise covers fungi, plants and animals. In addition to providing information on the main institutional affinity of the expert, the database also lists taxonomic societies and networks in which the taxonomist participates. 0079	D3 - Progress report on institutional integration agreements	Anonymous	"A report on national consortia and other multilateral agreements has been prepared (App. 1) which shows that up to now the amount of such formal collaborations between EDIT institutions is rather limited. To achieve durable institutional integration, it is necessary to establish formal agreements between partners in the NoE (and beyond, where appropriate). To this end, EDIT has undertaken a number of activities, which are summarised in this progress report" [Taken from the document.]	Month 23	1	Direction / policy makers	Projects and Networks > EDIT	Indirect	FUB-BGBM	EDIT	European Commission / Sixth Framework Programme	English	PDF	3	21-Apr-2012	http://www.e-taxonomy.eu/files/D3_progress_report_institutional_agreements.pdf	n/a

It was the collective efforts of the NSC to introduce a set of parameters used to measure the progress of integrative efforts and activities in order to meet EDIT objectives 1 and 4. In all thirteen parameters and the different methods to measure these were presented. The high number of and difference between these parameters reflect the many different approaches being taken by the EDIT Workpackages and EDIT partner institutions towards realizing an integration of the taxonomic community." Consequently, the passing-on of taxonomic knowledge and skills to a new generation might be decreasing. To evaluate if adequate training opportunities are currently still available to the new generation of taxonomists, EDIT scored today's education in taxonomy and analysed its strengths and weaknesses. 0120	data.europeana.eu-The Europeana Linked Open Data Pilot	Haslhofer, Bernhard; Isaac, Antoine	"data.europeana.eu is an ongoing effort of making Europeana metadata available as Linked Open Data on the Web. It allows others to access metadata collected from Europeana data providers via standard Web technologies. The data are represented in the Europeana Data Model (EDM) and the described resources are addressable and dereferencable by their URIs. Links between Europeana resources and other resources in the Linked Data Web will enable the discovery of semantically related resources. We developed an approach that allows Europeana data providers to opt for their data to become Linked Data and converts their metadata to EDM, benefiting from Europeana efforts to link them to semantically related resources on the Web. With that approach, we produced a first Linked Data version of Europeana and published the resulting datasets on the Web. We also gained experiences with respect to EDM, HTTP URI design, and RDF store performance and report them in this paper." 0121	Definition of the Europeana Data Model elements	Anonymous	"This document is a companion to the EDM Primer available from the Europeana v1.0 website (http://version1.europeana.eu/web/europeana-project/technicaldocuments/). Both documents reflect the consensus reached in discussions in the Europeana v1.0 Work Package 3 meetings in 2009 and the first half of 2010. These documents are complete and consistent but the model described may undergo changes as a result of testing in the prototype. It is the intention that these documents will remain stable until the end of the prototyping phase. At that time, any changes that need to be made as a result of prototyping and further discussions with technical experts and content providers will be included in the next version of the Europeana Data Model." 0124	Europeana Aggregators Handbook	Anonymous	"The overall aim of the handbook is to provide sufficient information to aggregators that wish to submit data to Europeana and become sustainable partners of the service. The handbook first addresses the role of aggregators in the Europeana organisational model. The following sections describe the technical, organisational and financial requirements for the submission of data to Europeana. Finally, the handbook lists a number of resources, which are useful for the overall development and sustainability of aggregators, for example the aggregators' case studies and surveys." 0157	The Europeana Data Model for Cultural Heritage What is the issue ? How does EDM contribute to the Web of Data or Semantic	Anonymous	"A vast number of Europe's cultural heritage objects are digitised by a wide range of data providers from the library, museum, archive and audio-visual sectors, and they all use different metadata standards. This data needs to appear in a meaningful way in a crosscultural, multilingual context such as Europeana. Numerous cultural heritage resources such as thesauri exist worldwide and have the potential to add valuable content at low cost when re-used. Duplication of effort, however, needs to be avoided. The Linked Open Data environment lacks authoritative data from the cultural heritage community to contribute to the development of new knowledge." 0161	The Problem of the Yellow Milkmaid : A Business Model Perspective on Open Metadata (Europeana White Paper No. 2)	Harry Verwayen; Martijn Arnoldus; Kennisland; Peter B. Kaufman	"Interest in open metadata is growing among policy makers, the cultural heritage sector, the research community, and software and application developers. At the European level, the Digital Agenda for Europe 2020 identifies 'opening up public data resources for re-use' as a key action in support of the Digital Single Market. 2 The European Commission is reviewing the Directive on Re-Use of Public Sector Information. The Commission's The New Renaissance report 3, published in January 2011, emphatically endorsed open data. At the national level, for example in the UK, the higher education community has issued the Open Metadata Principles 4 calling on metadata to be openly available for innovative re-use." 0207	A view on collection databasing Notas para el taller de Fichado de datos para técnicos de colecciones de historia natural (Junio 2009)	Francisco Pando	This presentation was delivered as a part of the "2nd GBIF Data Recording for technicians in Natural History Collections ".Collection databasing is expensive and laborious, and their results are only visible in the long term. It is for that reason that such a task should be tackled from the perspective of the utility. When planning the computerization of a collection, is necessary to consider carefully the objectives and how the database is going to fulfill them. Doing otherwise is throwing away time and money.	9-06-2009	n/a	Collections Manager / Technicians	Technical questions > Database systems;	Indirect	GBIF Spain	GBIF Spain	Spanish High Council of Research (CSIC)	Spanish	Video	n/a	21-Apr-2012	http://www.gbif.es/videos/video_detalle.php?IDVideo=53	n/a

0221	Creative Commons global network	Anonymous	The idea of universal access to research, education, and culture is made possible by the Internet, but our legal and social systems don't always allow that idea to be realized. Copyright was created long before the emergence of the Internet, and can make it hard to legally perform actions we take for granted on the network: copy, paste, edit source, and post to the Web. The default setting of copyright law requires all of these actions to have explicit permission, granted in advance, whether you're an artist, teacher, scientist, librarian, policymaker, or just a regular user. To achieve the vision of universal access, someone needed to provide a free, public, and standardized infrastructure that creates a balance between the reality of the Internet and the reality of copyright laws. That someone is Creative Commons.	n/a	n/a	Legal department / Legal advisor	Copyright and IPR questions;	Indirect	Creative commons	n/a	Unknown	English	website	n/a	21-Apr-2012	http://creativecommons.org/	n/a

0222	Creative Commons licenses and the non-commercial condition: Implications for the re-use of biodiversity information	Hagedorn, Gregor; Mietchen, Daniel; Morris, Robert A.; Agosti, Donat; Penev, Lyubomir; Berendsohn, Walter G.; Hobern, Donald	"The Creative Commons (CC) licenses are a suite of copyright-based licenses defining terms for the distribution and re-use of creative works. CC provides licenses for different use cases and includes open content licenses such as the Attribution license (CC BY, used by many Open Access scientific publishers) and the Attribution Share Alike license (CC BY-SA, used by Wikipedia, for example). However, the license suite also contains non-free and non-open licenses like those containing a "non-commercial" (NC) condition. Although many people identify "non-commercial" with "non-profit", detailed analysis reveals that significant differences exist and that the license may impose some unexpected re-use limitations on works thus licensed. After providing background information on the concepts of Creative Commons licenses in general, this contribution focuses on the NC condition, its advantages, disadvantages and appropriate scope. Specifically, it contributes material towards a risk analysis for potential re-users of NC-licensed works." I hope it's short enough to read, long enough to be useful, and organized to let you skip around and dive into detail only where you want detail. It doesn't cover every nuance or answer every objection. But for those who read it, it should cover enough territory to prevent the misunderstandings that delayed progress in our early days." It details the issues that arise in determining scanning priorities, avoiding duplication of scanning across the founding 12 natural history and botanical garden library collections, and the problems related to the complexity of serials, monographs, and series. Highlighted are the tools, procedures, and methodology for addressing the details of a mass-scanning operation. In its initial version it reflects the outcomes of the interactive session on "the ideal project" that has been organized with the participation of all the partners during the Kick-Off Meeting in October 2010. During the project's lifetime, this White Paper will serve as a living document that will be periodically revisited and revised: recording the outcomes of similar interactive sessions to take place during project meetings as well as other ways in which the project vision is affected/shaped. Overall, will try to document the evolution of the Natural Europe vision and the foreseen outcomes under the objectives set forth by the project." 0316	The New Renaissance - Report of the 'Comité des Sages'	Elisabeth Niggeman, Jacques De Decker, Maurice Lévy	"For centuries, libraries, archives and museums from across Europe have been the custodians of our rich and diverse cultural heritage. They have preserved and provided access to the testimonies of knowledge, beauty and imagination, such as sculptures, paintings, music and literature. The new information technologies have created unbelievable opportunities to make this common heritage more accessible for all. Culture is following the digital path and "memory institutions" are adapting the way in which they communicate with their public" [Taken from the document].	10-Jan-2011	n/a	Direction / policy makers	Projects and Networks > Europeana	Direct	Comité des sages	Unknown	Unknown	English	PDF	45	21-Apr-2012	http://ec.europa.eu/information_society/activities/digital_libraries/doc/refgroup/final_report_cds.pdf	n/a
